Aldi back-to-school advert causes outrage

A top supermarket chain has apologised after provoking social media outrage with an advert that many people felt pandered to negative stereotypes of maths in schools.

Aldi's new back to school advert, part of its 'amazing' series, was screened on ITV ahead of a 'special buy' promotion for £4 school uniforms. It included the offending line that "finding out your first lesson back [at school] is double maths" is "not so amazing".

How many school uniforms could I buy in Aldi if I had in my pocket a 1p, 2p, 5p, 10p, 20p, 50p, £1 and £2 coin in addition to a £5, £10, & £20 note in my wallet?
