

The Daily Rigour

Sun 30th December 2018

Issue No. 134

Your free weekly numeracy newspaper!

Study estimates Britain will waste 2.2 tonnes of cheese this Christmas

According to a new survey, over the festive period Brits will waste around 2.2 tonnes of cheese.

How many grams of cheese will be wasted over the festive period? Give your answer in WORDS.

How long will it take you to run off your Christmas dinner?

The average Brit eats around 6000 calories on Christmas day but how long would it take a person to run off these extra calories?

A person will typically burn off 10 calories per minute running at a moderate pace.

How long would it take a person to run off the Christmas dinner opposite? Give your answer in hours, minutes and seconds.

Army captain is first Briton to cross Antarctica solo

An Army officer has become the first Briton in history to trek unaided across Antarctica.

Captain Lou Rudd, 49, finished the solo 924 mile journey on Friday after 56 days.

The trek saw Captain Rudd haul a 140 kg sled without a rest day and endure daily temperatures of -30°C.

On average, how many miles did Captain Rudd travel per day?

Heat wave in Australia could reach potentially lethal 50 degrees

While some of us were wishing for a white Christmas most Australians are just hoping for daytime temperatures to drop below 40°C as their heat wave continues.

A report from the Bureau of Meteorology said there was a temperature peak of 49°C in Marble Bar, Western Australia on Thursday.

What was the difference in temperature between Marble Bar and Antarctica on Thursday?