#abitofmathseveryday on the Chase!

During these unprecedented times we can always rely on the Chase to give us our bit of maths! Wednesday's episode saw a contestant tested on their knowledge of properties of 2D shapes.

- (a) Do you know what the correct answer is?

During the final chase, and with a maths student on board, the team could have won the game if they answered the following question correctly.

What mathematical term comes from the Latin for touch?

The Chaser (the Beast, a former maths teacher!) said Calculus and the team said tessellation.

- (b) They were both wrong! Do you know what the correct mathematical term is?

And shown below are a couple of questions from Friday's episode for you to try...

- (c) What is the only whole number between 2 and 10 whose name starts with a vowel?

And, unbelievably, the Chaser (the Dark Destroyer) said the answer to the question below was 2 miles!

If a car is travelling at 60 miles per hour, what distance is covered in a minute?

A Half a mile B A mile C Two miles

- (d) Can you explain why he is incorrect?

Superman celebrates 82nd birthday!

9 days ago, Superman celebrated his 82nd birthday from when he first appeared in a comic.

Superman was the first of his kind when he first appeared, a 'superhero' with powers and abilities far beyond those of mortal men who fought injustice and crime in a brightly coloured uniform and a bold symbol emblazoned on his chest.

Though other heroes like Batman or Spiderman may get more of the spotlight, Superman forever stands above the rest as a reminder that we all have a superhero within us.

What is Superman's date of birth?

Pescara football club adopts Italian boy's shirt design

A six year old boy in Italy is celebrating after his football shirt design was adopted by the professional team Pescara.

Luigi D'Agostino beat other children in a competition, run by the club for young fans, aimed at easing the boredom of being stuck indoors during the coronavirus lockdown.

Shown below is a pattern created using striped football shirts. Each strip is represented by a different team even when the pattern repeats.

Juventus Sunderland Huddersfield ??????

Can you think of a football team to represent the final shirt?
