People encouraged to "cash in" their Irish pounds

People with old Irish pounds are being encouraged to take them to the bank bank as millions have still not been changed into euros.

Ireland adopted the euro on the 1st of January 2002 with people across the country scrambling at the time to get used to the new currency.

€346.9 million worth of Irish pounds has yet to be redeemed, but the good news is that the Central Bank of Ireland continues to exchange old pound banknotes and coins with no deadline for the conversion of.

Current exchange rate:

Irish £1 = €1.26974

GBP £1 = €1.19

According to an analysis €224.1 million in notes are yet to be redeemed by Irish people with the rest of the amount in coins.

- (a) What is the total value of the coins still to be redeemed? Give your answer in WORDS.
