Scientists say eight glasses of water a day may be too much

New research has found that the recommended eight glasses of water a day may be too much.

Scientists have discovered the recommended intake of two litres of water a day was often more than people needed.

Given around half of the daily intake of water comes from food, they estimate people only really need about 1.5 litres per day.

How many glasses of water do people really need per day?

Kylian Mbappe breaks World Cup record with superb finish to send France into the last eight Kylian Mbappe took France one step closer to defending their World Cup title, with a superb finish vs Poland in the last 16 of this year's tournament. He is now the first player to have scored 8 goals in World Cup finals matches before his 24th birthday.
